

Victory as Peers vote for Women, not pimps and punters!!!

Policing and Crime Bill Clause 14 was passed with no amendments!! This means that it will be a criminal offence to pay for a sexual act from a person who has been exploited whether or not the punter is aware of the exploitation. The message is clear - as a society we put the rights of women to live free from exploitation above the right of punters to buy a person for sexual use without consequence. This is the first time in UK law that demand is being tackled - it is a huge victory!

A massive well done and thank you to all of you who wrote letters to MPs and Peers, who signed the joint statement of support, who protested outside the Houses of Parliament yesterday, who gave testimony and were part of or helped make the film of video testimony that was screened in the House of Commons on the eve of the debate and who have been working for years to raise awareness about the reality of prostitution and the need to tackle demand for commercial sexual exploitation - The joint statement and the film screening and testimonies were all mentioned in the debate.

It would be really good to email the Peers who spoke in favour of Clause 14 to thank them for speaking out for all women and for all people who have been exploited.

Peers to thank are:

Baroness Scotland

Baroness O'Cathain

Archbishop of York

Baroness Howarth

Lord Morrow

Lord McColl

It would also be really good to thank the following MPs/Ministers for their role in pushing the Clause through the House of Commons:

Fiona MacTaggart

Jacqui Smith

Harriet Harman

Victory as Peers vote for women, not pimps and punters!

The Demand Change! Campaign (1) is delighted to announce a major victory for women exploited by the sex industry, as last night the House of Lords voted in favour of Clause 14 (formerly 13) of the Policing & Crime Bill^[i], putting the rights of exploited women over those of pimps and punters.

In focusing on the demand for sexual services, Clause 14 shifts criminal liability away from people exploited through prostitution and places responsibility firmly on the shoulders of those who contribute to commercial sexual exploitation by choosing to purchase girls, boys, women and men for sexual use.

This is a huge achievement for the 67 women's and human rights organisations^[ii] which supported this bill, and which campaigned tirelessly to obtain justice for the women, children and men who have for so long been exploited by the sex industry. Many of these organisations attended the successful Demand Change! mass support rally in Parliament Square just before the vote^[iii], calling on Peers to 'Vote for Women, not Pimps and Punters!'.

Comments from Eaves (2) chief executive Denise Marshall

"This is fantastic news. Legislation to make it an offence to pay for sex with someone subject to force, who has been exploited, is a no-brainer. It should clearly be illegal. I am delighted for the women whom we support, who have a right to live without fear of force, violence or exploitation, and for whom this law is crucial.

"The vital next step in the process is for those exploited in prostitution to be fully decriminalised and provided with high quality support to exit the sex industry safely, and the Demand Change! campaign will continue to press for this."

Comments from Anna van Heeswijk, OBJECT (3)

"Clause 14 brings the buyer out of the shadows and says that as a society we put the rights of vulnerable women, children and men above the right of punters to buy sex. This is a major victory for all those who have been exploited – many of whom shared their stories in a film screened in front of a packed audience in the House of Commons on the eve of the debate – and it is also a victory for all those who have joined the campaign to end commercial sexual exploitation by tackling demand. Thank you Peers for listening to our protest chants and for deciding to `vote for women, not pimps and punters!'"

Testimony from "Angel", a survivor of prostitution^[iv]

"I had to say I enjoyed it and that I chose it – it's what the johns want to hear, and as a prostitute I existed for their pleasure, my body and words were there for their pleasure. The real me was effectively mute.

It makes sense to target the johns and criminalise them, because they hold the money and they have all the power."

Notes

(1) The Demand Change! campaign calls for the Government to introduce a human rights based approach to prostitution by decriminalising the selling of sex and offering support to those currently in prostitution to help them exit, whilst at the same time criminalising the purchase of sex to tackle demand for commercial sexual exploitation and trafficking.

(2) Eaves provides high quality housing and support to vulnerable women including those who have been exploited through prostitution. It also carries out research, advocacy and campaigning to prevent all forms of violence against women. www.eaves4women.co.uk

[i] The House of Lords voted on Tuesday 3 November to pass Clause 14 (formerly Clause 13) of the Policing and Crime Bill, which criminalises the purchase of sex acts from a person who has been exploited. It shifts criminal liability away from the person being exploited and places it firmly on the shoulders of the person contributing to the exploitation by choosing to pay for sex and thereby creating demand. This is a crucial step towards ending the exploitation of women and men through prostitution by tackling the problem at its root – tackling the demand.
